Join our camp at the nuclear arms base in Büchel (Rhineland-Palatine/Germany) between July 13th and August 9th. Four weeks long, everyday, we would like to enlist new groups as well as individuals for our non-violent actions. We want to focus attention on the illegal storage of nuclear weapons on the military base. Forms of protest are going to be diverse: picketing, blockades, "Go-In" actions, climbing activities with banners, surrounding the airbase (with the distribution of flyers, calling on soldiers and pilots to refuse their illegal orders), info tables in the midst of the tourism hot-spot of the town Cochem.....There sure are plenty of ideas! The fantasy has its boundaries though, in this case where an action would no longer be non-violent anymore.

The point is, through disrupting the operating procedure, we increase the pressure on the government. This will be the case by having our constant visual and audio presence every day in the region.

Nuclear Weapons in Germany ***

Currently, about 20 US nuclear warheads are stationed at the German Büchel airbase, which equal in their power of destruction more than 150 Hiroshima sized bombs. At this base, Germany provides the delivery system for the B 61 nuclear war heads with the help of the Tornado fighters of the 33rd Fighter-Bomber Squadron. US- mini-nukes of type B 61 - 11 could also be deployed there. German pilots there are training for airdrops; and according to a German military strategy paper, in the future at the "Bombodrom" (bombing range) in the state of Brandenburg (FREIE HEIDE) for training in the technique of dropping nuclear bombs. On command, German pilots are obliged to transport into and drop these nuclear bombs onto any future target areas. This obligation results from our government's adherence to the nuclear "sharing" agreement of NATO, which is factually under US control. Nuclear first strikes, even against non-nuclear countries, or "preemptive" wars of aggression with mini-nukes in the so-called "war on terror" are current topics in discussions on the new NATO doctrine. The nuclear weapons stationed here are also strategically embedded to keep other nuclear powers in check for the distribution wars over the world's last resources and markets.

The 2008 review and the prospect of 2009 ***

Our campaigns for a nuclear weapons free Germany at the Büchel air base in August last year were successful, colorful and diverse. App. 2,000 people protested in front of the fence, while 45 followed the call "bye-bye nuclear bombs - Büchel 2008" to conduct a "Go-in" action. Three Belgian participants succeeded in surmounting the fence in spite of a disproportionate 4,500 strong policing force. The picture on the right shows the group Pinky while being arrested at the perimeter (only in the flyer).

Our ideas for this summer's actions borrow from the Faslane 365 blockades (below). We would like to reach out to many groups and individuals (you!) to choose a date for your own activities, connecting your respective political views with the local nuclear weapons issue: e.g., groups working against the social security roll-back could focus on (nuclear) military expenses. How are climate change and energy politics connected to a possible nuclear war? Which health risks are posed by nuclear source material to the indigenous population in the uranium mining areas? How is the so-called civil use of nuclear energy from NPPs related to nuclear weapons, etc.

This list could go on and on. Angie Zelter, who received the Alternative Nobel Peace Prize for her demilitarization campaigns at the British nuclear submarine base in Faslane/Scotland, also took part in our "Go-in" action in 2008 in Büchel. She called for "increased civil disobedience in Büchel". In the UK she was acquitted by the highest court, since they also recognized the illegality of nuclear weapons in its findings. In 2007 the one-year blockades of Faslane 365 achieved the training of more than 10,000 participants in civil disobedience. Now the Scottish Parliament also demands from the British government the withdrawal of the nuclear submarines.

The camp ***

To create an infrastructure for these many acts of protest, we will set up our action camp on a meadow just 2 km from the Büchel base. During this camp we plan concerts every Saturday in front of the base's main gate. Like last year, there will be solar power, composting and wheelchair accessible toilets, trailers with Internet access, facility and cooking tents as well as communal sleeping tents. We will support you with press / PR work and we also plan climbing, clowns and direct action workshops. We will also try to help individuals find the right group to participate in, and provide information about the nuclear weapons. This way different groups are able to utilize the camp for shorter or longer periods during these four weeks, get to know the site and recent resistance action, think of demonstrative or "disobedient" ways of direct action and follow through in practice.

On August 8th and 9th the final actions will take place: Among others the bicycle marathon of the Pacemakers will arrive. We hope we can yet again welcome a renowned artist for the Saturday night event on August 8th. On August 9th, the anniversary of the Nagasaki bombing, a protest march to the main gate is planned. Then it will be 64 years since a plutonium bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, which immediately killed approx. 70,000 people and led to 200,000 additional deaths due to long term effects.

Free Germany of nukes by 2010! ***

The association "Abolish nuclear weapons - start locally" (which we, the GAAA, also belongs to) would like to achieve with the campaign "our future - without nuclear weapons" that the German government's representative declares at the conference hosted by the UN regarding the nuclear weapons non proliferation treaty in 2010: "There are no more nuclear weapons on German soil. Germany has ended the nuclear "sharing" agreement." On occasion of this year's election the association is lobbying every single representative in the German Bundestag in regards to his or her position on nuclear weapons.

Illegal and contrary to international law ***

With the participation of Germany in nuclear "sharing," the German government defies a judicial finding of the International Court of Law of July 8th, 1996. According to this, threatening to deploy nuclear weapons is entirely in violation of international law. The German government simply declared the fact of nuclear weapons storage in Germany, their ready availability for deployment as well as the training in the usage for the purpose of real life scenarios is not in itself a case of threat. The nuclear "sharing" agreement also violates the nuclear proliferation treaty, which Germany joined as a non-nuclear weapon country. Germany is obligated here under not to accept from any entity, neither directly nor indirectly, nuclear weapons or control thereof.

Not least because of our government's blatant breach of law in regards to nuclear weapons - but lastly because our conscience dictates this- we are led to a deep conviction of being obligated to lead a resistance against this. Nonviolent resistance, as much as the act of civil disobedience, is therefore legitimate and an imperative.

Agreement ***

We believe that non-violence also means not to respond with defensive violence, even when provoked, because we would like to break this vicious circle of escalation.

We do not want to verbally abuse anyone, but respect our opponents (e.g police officers, soldiers, opponents of our actions), even if we criticize their role in society and their specific conduct. When we take the stride from protest to non-violent resistance, this then means that we do not limit ourselves to legally sanctioned actions, but also in a level-headed manner break laws and regulations. With this, we pursue the goal of rendering a continued storage of nuclear weapons at Büchel politically impossible.

A short history of the GAAA

The GAAA (Nonviolent Campaign for the Abolition of Nuclear Weapons) was founded in 1996 to push for a nuclear weapons free Germany as a step towards a nuclear weapon free world by means of non violent actions of civil disobedience among others. In 2004 the GAAA became a member organisation of the DFG-VK. So far the GAAA organized 9 trespass/Go-In actions, of which 7 took place at the nuclear base in Büchel and 2 at the nuclear weapons dispatch center of US-EUCOM in Stuttgart. Actions of civil disobedience require a good preparation and follow-up. In this we already gained experience with the help of the GAAA. We provide trainings in non-violent campaigns as well as council in case of legal consequences. We also have some funds for legal aid.

The ultimatum for Chancellor Merkel to end the illegal state of nuclear weapons possession ran out on August 6, 2008 (Hiroshima memorial day). The Sichelschmiede, the Initiativkreis gegen Atomwaffen, the GAAA and many other groups and individuals are announcing now more acts of civil disobedience in Büchel and/or declare their solidarity, to raise pressure on our government!
